FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Choose McKenney's, Inc. Energy Services to Put Your Facility on the Path to Building Performance

Atlanta, Georgia — August 17, 2017 — Keeping a facility operating around the clock is no small job. Add in aging systems with device and sensor issues, and you have a facility that has too much variance in occupant comfort, takes too much time to operate, and costs too much energy to run.

Put your facility on the path to building performance improvements with McKenney's Energy Services

McKenney's Energy Services is your partner for innovative, integrated services and solutions to get your building on the path to improved facility performance. With these services on your side, your facility will be put on the path to peak performance through comprehensive analysis, planning and execution.

Benefits

- Lower utility costs
- Increased asset value
- Higher occupant comfort
- Five-year capital plan options with targeted utility reductions
- Significant time savings for facility operators
- Reduced O&M repairs over time
- Option to pay for improvements through energy and operational savings
- Increased visibility of facility and portfolio operational information

The Path to Peak Performance

As a full-service, single-source provider, McKenney's combines building analytics, engineering analysis and hands-on technician support to put your facility on the path to improved performance. Here's how they do it:

1. Analyze

Developing an understanding of your facility using data and your unique operational needs.

2. Plan

Creating your customized plan of facility performance improvements and increased savings.

3. Improve

Calling on its extensive experience and resources to deliver proactive, innovative services and provide real value for your bottom line.
