McKenney's, Inc. Building Performance Solutions Helps Reduce Risk on Your Next ESPC Project

Atlanta, Georgia — October 22, 2015 — Energy service companies (ESCOs) know that successful projects depend on experienced teams that build owners' trust, supplement ESCO resources and reduce project risk. McKenney's, Inc. Building Performance Solutions is the ideal partner, providing safe, sustainable, high-quality services and solutions to reduce risk at every stage—from ECM development and IGA support to project implementation and long-term performance.

ECM development

During ECM development, McKenney's Building Performance Solutions team provides engineers, estimators, construction professionals and technicians at their own risk when partnering with energy savings performance contract (ESPC) customers to identify and develop viable project ECMs.

Investment grade audit support

The McKenney's team of experienced engineers and technicians will apply industry-leading standards and best practices to support the collection of operational, system and energy data at the site.

High quality, safe implementation

Building Performance Solutions delivers design/build and full turnkey services across the Southeast. The company's 175 OSHA-10 certified foremen, 35 LEED® certified Project Managers and 11 Professional Engineers use Behavior Based Safety (BBS) to ensure exceptional quality and safety performance—from engineering and 3D BIM development through prefabrication and field installation.

Sustainable building performance

Their technicians are trained in all types of MEP systems and routinely provide industry-leading systems start-up, commissioning and owner training after construction is complete. They deliver detailed project close out, including 3D BIM models, commissioning documentation and M&V services to support your long-term project goals.

Resources to reduce risk

Successful ESPC projects depend on solid ECM development and safe, sustainable, high-quality project implementation. McKenney's Building Performance Solutions has the resources, capacity and experience to be a valuable partner on any ESPC project.
